

MAIL RUSH ON AT POST OFFICE HERE; CLERKS KEPT BUSY

Influx of Letters, Cards and Parcels Began to Arrive
On Thursday

ENGAGE EXTRA HELPER

Special Delivery Mail Being Rushed to Business
Section

The annual rush of Christmas mail has started, with all workers at the Bristol postoffice being kept busy for the past several days, and prospects for heavy mail from now until the 25th.

According to Postmaster Clarence G. Young, the amount of parcels, letters and other pieces is just about the same as last year.

The rush started on Thursday, although for a few days previous to that time the number of pieces had steadily been growing.

Quantity of parcels and other pieces of mail is expected to reach its peak on Monday.

Carriers are hoping to be able to finish up all Christmas deliveries on Tuesday at an early hour, being free to enjoy a holiday on the 25th. Only special delivery mail will be placed in the hands of addressees on Christmas Day.

During this rush period one additional individual has been employed for parcel work, the numbers of parcels being many.

In order to facilitate delivery of special delivery mail to those living on Mill street, where a great quantity of such pieces is consigned, one carrier has been assigned to this special work.

For a number of years the public has been urged to mail parcels and Christmas letters and cards early in an effort to save the postal workers. This urging has been fruitful, evidently, for during the past week Christmas packages in particular have been received in Bristol and other sections in great numbers.

STUDENTS CONDUCT KITE FLYING CONTEST

Morrisville High Event Winnessed by Entire Student Body

SOME AERIAL STUNTS

MORRISVILLE, Dec. 21.—The newly organized Kite Club at Morrisville High School blossomed forth in all its splendor with a spectacular tournament in which about 40 kites participated.

Six events were held on the Robert Morris campus. Frances Ryan, of the sophomore class, won the 100-yard dash, and Charles Hughes, a senior was second. In this event the contestants were forced to fly their kites with a string length of 100 yards and then wind them into their hands.

The pulling event was won by Edward Thorne, of the seventh grade. His kite had a pull of eight pounds. Ira Gunn, a senior, won second prize, his kite having a pull of 32 ounces. Gunn also won the altitude contest, with Frances Ryan taking second honors.

Robert Burns, of the eighth grade, won the stunt event, and second prize went to a joint entry of John Denko and Edward Winiarski, both eighth graders. John Edwards, sophomore, won the sport landing contest, his kite making a perfect landing in less than a minute after the event had started. It was at least five minutes later before Edward Thorne landed his kite for the second prize.

The final event of the day was a kite battle. Each of the contestants were permitted to move within a fixed radius, but they were not allowed to interfere physically with any other contestant. The battle lasted over 30 minutes before William Burns' entry was the only kite left in the sky for first prize.

Prizes were also given for various types of kites. Louis Reitzle, a sophomore, won the prize for the largest kite entered, while Henry Stockham took the honors for the smallest. Reitzle's kite stood eight feet high, compared to the smallest entry, which was only one and a half inches high, and was necessarily flown by a silk thread.

Ira Gunn won the honors for the most uniquely constructed kite. His entry was a combination of a modified box kite, with a plane surface. The prize for the lowest flying rate was won by John Edwards.

FREE THE WORLD OF THIS CURSE

There are 2,000,000 lepers in the world, but they no longer need to go about in wilderness places, holding clothes to their mouths and calling out "Unclean, unclean." For science has got the mastery of leprosy.

W. M. Danner, of New York, general secretary of the American Mission to Lepers, says that the world could have been rid of leprosy long ago if there had been the proper cooperation among the nations. Leprosy is not incurable. It now is definitely proved that treatment given in the early stages of the disease will effect speedy cure. Many incipient cases can be made "symptom free" without hospital residence for the patient.

Mr. Danner is the representative of a world-wide movement to establish hospitals, out-patient departments and financial organization to eradicate this dreaded disease. The people of the United States are interested, because this country has been invaded.

The treatment is simple and it is said to be practicable to train persons who have been cured to administer the remedy to those applying to the out-patient departments for aid. Religious organizations long have been the chief promoters of the service to lepers. Now, with the cooperation of science and the authority of government, it is hoped that the world will be freed from a curse that has terrorized large numbers of people since pre-historic times.

GREAT OPEN SPACES

The day of the "great wide open spaces" is not yet past for the United States. In spite of the incursions of civilization there is still real wilderness left.

This is the solemn conclusion of the United States forest service after an exhaustive survey undertaken because certain people, strong in the primitive urge, had been getting a bit worried of late lest the zeal for summer resorts and motor roads might eat up the last of the wild lands.

With the rank urbanite one square mile of woodland, uninhabited and pathless, could pass as a wilderness. But those who know the woods might call such a virgin tract a "grove." As for the forest service, the standard it adopted for its survey was 360 square miles, or ten average townships.

The nation-wide hunt for wilderness netted seventy-four each ranging in area from 360 to 10,000 square miles.

So there are still seventy-four places where those who would rough-it can go to get away from traffic, silk stockings, bathtubs, newsboys and early morning milk wagons.

No, the forest service will not guarantee that one, on entering any of these forests primeval, flees from humanity itself. There are thousands of Americans—and Europeans touring in America—looking for just such places as these "wildernesses" in which to make their vacation camps.

For those who like the primitive life America still affords it, and America was not all wilderness and Americans all frontiersmen so long ago that the great open spaces have lost their lure.

Opportunity knocks but once, envy keeps at it forever.

Hockey is now a major sport at the local institute and the girls celebrated the occasion by winning or tying all of their games with the exception of one.

The locals defeated the larger schools of the City Line and made Ambler, Jenkintown and Abington, York Road schools, succumb to them. Below is the complete record of Bristol's hockey team:

ZEPPELIN'S FLIGHT '29'S NOTABLE EVENT OF AIR

Record-Breaking 21-Day 'Round-the-World Flight Was Historic One

TWO SLIGHT MISHAPS

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(INS)—This historic and record-breaking 21-day 'round-the-world flight of the German dirigible, Graf Zeppelin, was easily the most noteworthy aeronautical event of the year 1929.

Carrying 16 passengers, a crew of 33 and 600 pounds of mail, the giant zeppelin took off from Lakehurst, N. J., on August 8, and on August 29, returned there after having covered 19,500 miles with refueling stops in Friedrichshafen, Germany; Tokio, and Los Angeles.

During its flight, the Graf flew over the Atlantic Ocean, the principal cities of Europe, the barren wastes of Siberia, the Pacific Ocean and the principal cities of the United States. The Tokio to Los Angeles leg of the flight was a record breaking achievement in itself as it marked the first time the Pacific Ocean had been spanned by a flying machine without a stop.

Slight Mishaps Only two slight mishaps marred the flight, one being a scraping of the ship's side against its hangar in Friedrichshafen and the other being the fouling of an electric wire in Los Angeles.

The Graf's flight was hailed by millions throughout the world and it is safe to say that it marked a new era in man's conquest of the air. Almost immediately after completion of the flight, contracts for the construction of dirigibles similar to the Graf were let in the United States by both the government and private interests.

Flying men in all parts of the world were lavish in their praise of the zeppelin's feat and many of them declared that it proved conclusively the superiority of lighter-than-air craft over heavier-than-air craft, especially for over-water travel.

Prominent passengers who made the round-the-world trip on the Graf included:

William B. Leeds, of New York; Lt. J. C. Richardson, of the United States Navy; Lt. Commander Rosen-dahl, of the United States Navy; Lady Grace Drummond Hay; Sir Hubert Wilkins, arctic explorer; Karl von Weizsacker; Robert Hartman, Max Geisenhayer, Gustav Kauder, Dr. S.

D. Seilkopf, of the Hamburg Weather Bureau; Lt. Col. Christoph Iselin, of the Swiss Army; Dr. Jeronimo Megias, physician to the King of Spain, and Heinz von Eschwege-Liebert.

Leg of The Flight

The official log of the ship's flight is as follows:

Thursday, Aug. 8.—Left Lakehurst, Sat., Aug. 10.—Landed at Friedrichshafen after covering 4,200 miles in 55 hours and 24 minutes.

Mon., Aug. 19.—Landed at Kasumigaura Airport, Tokio, after covering 6,800 miles in 101 hours and 53 minutes.

Mon., Aug. 26.—Landed at Los Angeles after covering 5,500 miles in 78 hours and 58 minutes.

Thurs., Aug. 29.—Landed at Lakehurst.

In addition to its 'round-the-world flight, the Graf Zeppelin and its commander, Hugo Eckener, further distinguished themselves by making several independent ocean flights during the year.

WAR CLOUDS BLOWN AWAY IN 1929 POINT TO NEARER WORLD PEACE; RUSSIA-CHINA SETTLE; CIVIL WARS PERSIST; MEXICO, PALESTINE CALM

Is the world becoming more peacefully minded?

This question may well be asked at the close of the year 1929 which, in addition to being treated to more than a half-dozen wars, actual or threatened, during its cycle of 365 days, also witnessed the first attempt to enforce the obligations of the Kellogg Anti-War Pact upon two signatory powers which had resorted to gestures of war as a method for settling a controversy.

The answer appears to be forthcoming from a review of the various conflicts which developed during the year, together with the methods invoked for settling them.

The conflicts which arose in 1929 involving the use of armed force, actual or threatened, were: the dispute between Paraguay and Uruguay over the territory in the Gran Chaco district; revolution in Mexico; revolution in Venezuela; revolution in Afghanistan; revolutions in China; Arab-Jewish rioting in Palestine; the Russo-Chinese dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway, and rioting in Haiti, necessitating intervention by U. S. Marines.

Civil War in China
The civil war in China is still progressing as the year closes, just as civil war has been in more or less active stage of progress in that country for the past dozen years. The Russo-Chinese dispute appears all but settled through direct peaceful negotiations between Chinese and Russian diplomatic representatives. All the other disputes have been settled, or the threats of them have been blown away.

In considering the methods employed for the settlement of the various disputes it is worthy of note that all but two of the outbreaks of violence this year arose from internal disorders in the country in which the outbreaks took place. Therefore these affairs were outside the scope and authority of the Kellogg Pact, and responsibility for settling them rested squarely upon the constituted government of the country concerned.

In the settlement of the two international disputes of this year the forces lined up with peaceful arbitration obtained one gratifying victory and sustained one sharp rebuff. The threat of war between Paraguay and Bolivia was averted through mediation by the countries, including the United States, of the Pan-American Union. Both Bolivia and Paraguay have formally signified their acceptance of such arbitration.

Mediation Rebuffed
The rebuffs to attempts to mediate was sustained at the hands of the Moscow Government when the Powers signatory to the Kellogg Pact, led by the United States, addressed identical notes to Moscow and Nanking reminding the governments of those two capitals of their obligations under the Kellogg Pact to preserve world peace. The Chinese government replied to the note in a conciliatory, even grateful tone, but the Moscow government tartly informed the world in general, and the United States in particular, that direct negotiations already had been started between the Chinese and Soviet governments, and that a settlement was nearly arrived at. Thus, while the cause for arbitration received a snub, the cause of settlement of disputes by peaceful means actually obtained a victory.

But, while the two international conflicts of the year were settled peaceably, the same can not be said of those disorders which sprung from civil strife within the nations which experienced such outbreaks. In most cases these conflicts were settled by force of arms.

In none of these cases, of course, could the Kellogg Pact or other treaties for arbitration be invoked as the conflict lay between sections or groups of individuals belonging to the same nation. These individual conflicts revealed to the general public of the world that the Kellogg Pact and all other similar treaties of arbitration and conciliation, while outlawing all wars between nations, had not and could not, as at present constituted, outlaw that most common form of conflict—civil war.

Internal Dissension
The above recapitulation of the conflicts which occurred during the year bears out the assertion that civil war is the more prevalent form of war. Five out of seven armed conflicts during the year were based on internal political dissension. The two international disputes were over territory or national property.

The Paraguayan-Bolivian conflict arose over rival claims of long standing by Paraguay and Bolivia to sovereignty over a wild section of border land between the Pilcomayo and Paraguay rivers. Both powers had erected a series of forts along the imaginary boundary in the Gran Chaco district, which had never been definitely surveyed or settled upon, and the threat of war arose from clashes between troops garrisoning these forts.

The first clash, in which several were reported killed on both sides, occurred on December 9, 1929, while President-Elect Hoover was touring the West Coast of South America. The President-Elect arrived in Buenos Aires a few days later to find all South America inflamed with talk of immediate war. Mr. Hoover, calling upon and conferring with President Irons and various high officials of several South American nations in Buenos Aires and Montevideo, early this year succeeded in setting in motion the machinery of arbitration and conciliation which finally brought about an agreement on the part of both principals to submit the dispute to arbitration.

In South America
The next armed conflict on the American continent was the Mexican revolution, which broke out on March 4, at almost the precise moment that Mr. Hoover was taking the oath as President of the United States.

This had its root deep in the complex soil of Mexico's political situation, but was directly due to the dissatisfaction of a number of Mexican Army officers with the prospects for electing their favored presidential candidate at the general election which was then several months distant.

A number of generals, most of them high in the confidence of the government of President Emilio Portes Gil, raised the banner of revolt and immediately began a drive on Mexico City from the north, west and south-east. The plan and only hope of success of the rebels was that all three columns would be able to converge upon the capital city before the government could rally a sufficient force to defend itself.

The Mexican government met the issue promptly and squarely. Former President Elias Calles was appointed Secretary of War and generalissimo in active charge of the Government's forces in the field the day after the revolt broke out. General Calles divided his forces into three columns, one to meet and stem the advance of each of the rebel columns. He selected as his able second General Almazan, the youngest Mexican General ever chosen to command a full division in the Mexican army. General Almazan, by a series of brilliant victories, was largely instrumental in completely crushing the revolt, and earned for himself the sobriquet of the "young Napoleon of Mexico."

Revolt in Venezuela
Although of short duration, the revolution cost Mexico dearly in lives, money and property destruction.

The revolution in Venezuela was of a less definite character. It was political in complexion, having for its object the ousting of the regime of former President Vicente Gomez, who, although he stepped aside early this year to permit the election of Juan Bautista Perez, as President of Venezuela, after himself ruling the country with an iron hand for nearly twenty years, is still the power behind the Presidency. The revolt was carried on chiefly by expatriates and exiles from Venezuela. Only a few minor engagements were fought along the Caribbean coast, and no definite conclusion was reached. The Venezuelan government is still in power as the year closes.

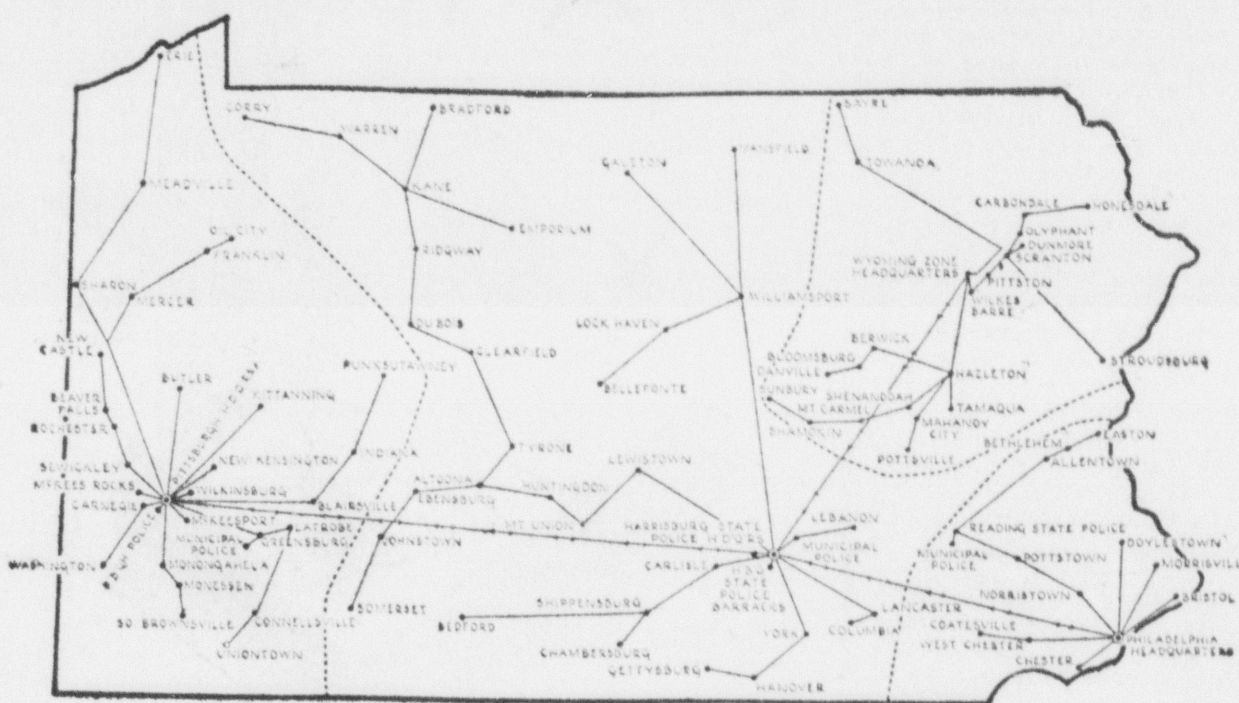

The strife in Afghanistan, that little known kingdom of fierce, Moslemic, fighting hill-people on the borders of India and Persia, was really a series of revolutions, one following the other as King succeeded King. In all, Afghanistan has had three kings in 1929.

How Police Units of the State Are Linked by Telephone Typewriters

A vast network of wires, connecting police departments in nearly 100 cities and towns, provides an incredibly speedy and efficient communication system for the transmission of police information throughout the State. There are four zones, Philadelphia, Luzerne county, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, from which radiate channels to the outlying points. Each headquarters unit sends messages to the points within its zone (the boundaries of which are shown by the heavy broken lines) and to other points in the system. Main headquarters are at Harrisburg. The new police inter-communication system began to operate today. Bristol is one of the stations in the chain.

TRAIN STRIKES AUTO, HURLING IT UPON WOMAN

Two Endeavor to Reach Place of Safety When Auto Stalls on Tracks

TRAIN DEMOLISHES CAR

Miss Helen Leard, Fallsington, Hurt; Companion Not Harmed

The heavy snow-storm today was partially blamed for a near-tragedy at Wheatshaf when an automobile became stalled upon tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad there, in the path of a fast-approaching train.

Leaping from the automobile when it stalled on the railroad a young man and young woman endeavored to reach a place of safety before the oncoming train struck the car. So close was the train when the two left the machine that when the impact occurred the automobile was thrown upon the young woman, injuring her severely.

The injured: Miss Helen Leard, Fallsington. Although considerably bruised the full extent of Miss Leard's injuries is not known as yet. X-ray pictures will be taken at the Harriman Hospital to which institution she was taken, in order to ascertain full extent of the injuries.

Miss Leard, in company with William Kraft, also of Fallsington, was enroute to Bristol, with Mr. Kraft at the wheel of the machine, a touring car. When they reached the Wheatshaf crossing at about 10.45, their car stalled on the tracks. Noticing the approach of the locomotive, the two hurriedly jumped from the automobile and ran, but the automobile hurled by the impact fell upon the one.

"Mike" McGretick, an employee of a sand and gravel company near the site of the accident, heard the crash, and hurried to the scene. He brought Miss Leard to the local hospital.

The automobile was completely wrecked.

The first real snow storm of the season, of any consequence, covered Bristol and surrounding territory with a mantle of white today. Traffic was delayed and the going for both vehicular, rail, water and pedestrian traffic was rather difficult.

The storm was greeted with pleasure by many as they thought it gave a holiday atmosphere to the approach of Christmas. Others were not so pleased as it meant discomfort and not pleasure for them, because they had not been so well provided with this world's goods.

Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Trenton, Bristol & Philadelphia Railway Company got their gangs of men at work early, sweeping out switches and keeping traffic moving.

The snow was of the dry variety which easily drifts and it was blown and tossed about at random, piling into small drifts here and there.

The storm proved a great handicap to boat traffic in the Delaware river, and warnings that a gale was raging from Cape Hatteras to Sandy Hook kept many smaller craft in harbors on the New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland coasts.

State highway officials at Harrisburg made plans to clear roads in the central section of the State, where the light snow had drifted and packed.

Bristol Infant Admitted To Convalescent Home

LANGHORNE, Dec. 23.—A three-months old baby, a little girl from Bristol, is being given the best of care at the Philadelphia Convalescent Home for Children, Langhorne.

The baby, who has been suffering from malnutrition is now under the care of a trained nurse, called in especially for this case at the Langhorne home, and is in a very serious condition.

The mother of the child is the sole support of the family in which there are other small children; and a grandmother, suffering from paralysis.

In vain had the mother endeavored to have her baby cared for while she earned food for the other members of the family. Although it is not the rule at the convalescent home at Langhorne to take children who are seriously ill, a cot was assigned to the baby, and the best of care is being given, in hopes that it might be placed on a safe road to recovery. The child was taken to Langhorne last week.

Although the institution at Langhorne is operated upon faith alone, depending on contributions for support and care of the many tots housed there, no expense is being spared in the case of the Bristol infant.

MACHINE HERE IS PUT INTO OPERATION IN STATE-WIDE CHAIN

Messages Received from Harrisburg Officially Open The Phone-Writer System

TO CAPTURE CRIMINALS

Messages Can Be Flashed Over Entire State In Short Time

With the inauguration this afternoon of the State Police telephone typewriter service Bristol and 94 other cities and towns in Pennsylvania became linked together as units of one of the most perfectly coordinated communication systems in the world.

The receiving machine, located in the Municipal Building, was installed several weeks ago and has been put through a series of tests, but today was officially placed in operation.

A number of interested persons including police officers, local manufacturers, borough officials and representatives of the Bell Telephone Company were in attendance.

Those present included: Borough engineer, John S. Roberts, Jr., Edgar Smith, Livingston Joyce, Miss Mary McFadden, John Folds, Daniel Perry, Thomas Ryan, Stanford K. Runyan, Justice Laughlin, Lester D. Thorne and A. G. Tyler, district wire chief; Frank Dilworth, P. B. X. inspector, and Milton Knott, commercial representative, Bell Telephone Co. The machine started operating at 12.05 and the first message received here was signed by Edward Martin, chairman of the Republican State Committee. It read:

"Greetings, Martin, chairman of Republican State Committee, sends Christmas greetings to all Pennsylvanians." Edward Martin.

The following message was received: "This system is dedicated to the maintenance of law and order and the suppression of crime."

(Signed) GOVERNOR FISHER.

From main headquarters, located in the capitol building at Harrisburg, a message to the effect that the service had been placed in operation was flashed to all points in the State-wide system. Distribution of the first routine messages was begun an instant later, and thus actual establishment of the system had been completed.

The service represents the cumulative achievement of the State Police, the Pennsylvania Police Chiefs' Association and others, who for several years have co-operated in the preparation of plans for the establishment of a communication system to expedite the transmission of vital information to assist in the capture of criminals and the suppression of crime.

The system, installed by the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, represents the most extensive project of its kind in the country. It is served by more than 3,400 miles of telephone circuits.

Commenting on the service, Major Lynn C. Adams, superintendent of State Police, said:

"I believe that the establishment of this system of police inter-communication is worth a thousand men in the increase of police protection, in its inhibitive effect on the potential criminal."

Major C. M. Wilhelm, assistant superintendent of the State Police, also is enthusiastic about the system.

"We propose to utilize the service for the sending of information pertaining to missing persons, stolen automobiles, escaped prisoners, holdups, murders and other crimes," he said.

"The stations comprising the system have been located, so far as possible, at strategic points in State and municipal police, and Highway Patrol quarters, so as to cover practically every avenue of escape that normally would be open to fugitives and suspects.

"The network has been made as large as possible with the funds at our disposal, and I confidently expect it will greatly increase the efficiency of police work throughout the State.

"The telephone typewriter service will supplement our radio broadcasts through station WBAC, which are heard at points as far distant as Georgia, Alabama, Wisconsin and Quebec. With the telephone typewriter system in operation, we now have the finest facilities available for the instantaneous dissemination of police information."

To obtain the maximum operating efficiency, the State has been divided into four zones, namely, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and Wyoming (anthracite section), with sending and receiving machines at each point.

The central bureau, with responsibility for the operation of the service, has been established in State Police Headquarters at Harrisburg, where two combination sending and receiving machines, and three additional receiving machines have been installed. This bureau also serves as headquarters for the Harrisburg zone.

MISPLACED POLITICS

Every chapter in the history of income-tax reduction taught the administration at Washington and the public what to expect from anti-administration forces in congress in the way of reaction to the Hoover-Mellon proposal of further reduction next year. Objections were inevitable, but not because there was anything objectionable in the proposal.

Opposition is based on two weaknesses, so called. It is argued that the cut should come in 1931 on the tax on 1930 incomes because a cut in next year's tax, which would be retroactive on this year's income, would benefit past endeavor not future enterprise. This argument is best countered by the quite general belief that national prosperity demands immediate relief for over-taxed business.

Secretary Mellon and the president, adopting the policy that it is unwise to burn the bridges behind you, urge congress, in the face of the usual partisan opposition, to make the tax cut operative for only one year now and if conditions warrant it to authorize another cut in 1931 by joint resolution of congress. Objection to such a fair and safe plan could be actuated only by the pettiest of partisan and personal politics.

Immediate action by congress is imperative, for business is now making its 1930 budget. A tax cut may not determine whether factories will shut down or expand, but it will help create that confidence upon which national prosperity is founded. The taxpayers favor no delay and warn the politicians not to make a partisan issue out of a non-partisan one.

CHANGES IN LAW ENFORCEMENT

Much is being said and heard of law enforcement and obedience to law. Everybody who has some law he especially desires enforced and obeyed is preaching enforcement of and obedience to that particular law. If they do not desire to appear prejudiced or to have a selfish purpose they make such specious claims as, "You must enforce all laws or no laws."

When Stephen A. Douglass, in the course of a political campaign, declared "It is the first duty of all citizens to obey the law," this was an agricultural country, with few laws to be obeyed and still fewer enforced. Douglass could not practice today what he preached before the Civil war, except he devote his whole time to the task and then he would be liable to arrest for vagrancy.

Dean Roscoe Pound, of the Harvard Law School, states that "much of what seems current disregard for law is connected with the change from a rural agricultural society to an urban industrial society. From the head of a big business, chafing under legislative restrictions on the conduct of his business, with well-paid counsel to advise him how to evade them, or the owner of a new Ford, who can see no sense in the latest traffic regulation, there are infinite gradations of self-reliance, righteous protest, indifference, lawlessness and crime."

The boss can pick out those who cinch their jobs by delivering the goods. They don't laugh at his stories.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

ITEMS OF INTEREST AS CLIPPED FROM NEWSPAPER FILES

A thirty-five year old copy of the Newtown Enterprise gives several interesting items. The copy dated December 22, 1894, published the following:
John H. Bunting moved from Bensalem to Bristol.

William Hulme, of Bensalem, sailed for his old home in England.

William Samsel was appointed keeper of the new toll gate on the Richboro and Pineville turnpike, in Richboro.

John Leshar was critically ill at his home in Southampton township.

A frame church was being built on the Trevoise Camp Meeting grounds.

Edwin M. Swartz, a farmer living near Bridge Valley, had a leg broken when a tree he was cutting fell on him.

The United Workmen, a lodge organized in 1885 and meeting in the Triumph Building, Newtown, chose officers for 1895 as follows: Past Master Workman, Cyrus B. White; Master Workman, Elwood B. Longshore; Foreman, Robert B. Bloom; Overseer, Willis G. Worstall; Guide, Robert W. Lovett; L. W. Henry M. Pownall; O. W. Thomas P. Hampton; Recorder, Joseph P. Carver; Receiver, Horace B. Hogeland; Financier, Harry A. Smith; Trustees, Samuel Willard, Willis G. Worstall and Robert B. Bloom.

Three collisions occurred during the week, smashing up wagons but not seriously injuring the drivers or occupants. The milk wagon of Harry McCorkle and a falling top carriage of a son of Owen Moon, of Trenton, came together. The Moon carriage was put out of business. A similar mix up of the carriage of Charles Pugh, of Newtown township, and the market wagon of George Janney wrecked the conveyance of the former. Mrs. Maggie, wife of Harman D. Addis, had a runaway while driving by the West School in Newtown township. Another team was struck at the entrance to Spring Garden bridge. Mrs. Addis was thrown out and dragged some distance but not seriously injured.

B. Frank White, of Middletown purchased the 81 acre farm of Joseph W. Knowles, in Upper Makefield for $72.70 an acre.

Firebugs burned the barn of Ashton Vandegrift, in Bensalem, and a large hay house on the farm of C. S. Vandegrift, tenanted by George Ebert.

A portrait of the late Josiah B. Smith, of Newtown, and three of his bound books of historical manuscripts were donated to the Bucks County Historical Society by his sister, Dr. Lettie A. Smith. He was chairman of the first meeting to organize the society. One of the books given the society contained a full account of the history for Newtown until 1886.

gbanistan has had four Kings during this single year.

The first revolt flared early in the year against King Amanullah as a result of that young, highly educated monarch's attempt too rapidly to westernize his subjects. Amanullah abdicated in favor of his elder, fat and lazy brother, Inayatullah, when he perceived that the various tribes of his kingdom had become manageable. But Inayatullah was less able to handle the rebellious tribesmen than Amanullah and he was forced to flee the throne of the ancient Khans before the advance-ing tribesmen under a former water boy in Amanullah's army, and more recently a successful bandit, Bacha-I-Sakao.

Afghans Trouble

Bacha-I-Sakao captured the capital city of Kabul after fierce fighting in which there were heavy casualties on both sides, and after airplanes of the British Air Force had evacuated all the foreign women and children from the city.

But the former water boy and bandit was more successful in leading a revolt against the government that he was organizing and maintaining a government after he had won the struggle by arms. He had scarcely ascended the throne when serious revolts broke out among the various tribes of the country, chiefly among the former supporters of King Amanullah, who were dissatisfied with the kind of government Bacha-I-Sakao had organized.

The new revolting forces, led by Nadir Khan, an uncle of former King Amanullah, defeated the water boy King's forces in one battle after another, steadily pushing the King's forces back upon the capital city, which Nadir Khan finally carried by storm. Bacha-I-Sakao was captured and executed by a firing squad. Nadir

Khan then proclaimed himself King of Afghanistan.

Palestine Riots

The Arab-Jewish riots in Palestine, in which many were killed and injured, grew out of friction between the two races, partly as a result of the age-old controversy over Jewish religious rites at the famous "Wailing Wall." The rioting continued for several days, until sufficient British troops arrived on the scene to restore order. An official investigation is still under way by order of the British government to determine the exact causes of the disturbances.

The serious threat of war in Manchuria between Chinese and Russian armies had its immediate cause in the action of the Nationalist Chinese government in seizing the Chinese Eastern Railway, in May, and the dismissal of the Russian general manager, assistant general manager, and hundreds of other Russian employees and officials.

The railway built in the closing year of the last century with joint Chinese and Russian funds, was, by treaty, jointly managed. The Chinese based their seizure of the railroad on the claim that the Russian officials had used their offices as centers for the distribution of communistic propaganda throughout China, for the purpose of overthrowing the government. Machine Here Is Put Into Operation in State-Wide Chain zone, which includes 13 cities and towns, are located in City Hall, Philadelphia.

Each of the zone headquarters can transmit simultaneously messages to the receiving stations within its division and also to the central bureau at Harrisburg.

Likewise, the central bureau can send messages to its own territory, to the other zone headquarters, and, when necessary, to all receiving stations in the State. In this way, nearly 100 points can receive messages at the same time.

Police in communities served only by receiving machines will telephone to their zone headquarters the messages they desire to have sent over the system.

The sending machines are equipped with a keyboard similar to that of a standard typewriter. When they are connected to receiving machines, any message typed by the operator is received and printed immediately by the distant receiving apparatus.

The service makes possible the instantaneous transmission of messages between widely scattered points, and provides each city and town with a typewritten copy.

Besides Philadelphia, this zone includes the following cities and towns, where receiving machines only are located: Reading, Chester, West Chester, Coatesville, Norristown, Pottstown, Allentown, Bethlehem, Easton, Doylestown, Morrisville and Bristol.

War Clouds Blown Away In 1929 Point to World Peace

pose of undermining and overthrowing the Nationalist government.

Denied By Soviet

This charge the Soviet government hotly denied, and both governments rushed large bodies of troops to their respective frontiers. There were numerous clashes along the frontiers between the respective troops between July and November, and finally the Soviet troops frankly invaded Manchuria, capturing a number of strategic points. China then agreed to send accredited diplomatic agents to the Siberian town of Habarovsk to negotiate a settlement of the dispute. This settlement appears all but completed as the year draws to a close.

The only war-like actions in which the United States forces were engaged during 1929 were some minor brushes between United States Marines and Nicaraguan revolutionists or bandits, in Nicaragua, which country is being policed by the Marines pending the establishment of a government strong enough to enforce order, and a ten minute battle at Aux Cayes, Haiti, between Marines and Haitian strikers and their sympathizers.

These armed clashes, in both countries, were purely police actions in which, unfortunately several persons were killed. There were no international issues involved and no large numbers of troops were utilized.
